Volunteer Activity - Personal Community Involvement!

Just because we are doing things differently this year, does not mean we lose connection with each other. This year SSWLHC challenges each attendee to volunteer in within your community. Activities can be as simple as a day in your community picking up trash, reading to kids, or volunteering at your local food pantry. You get to decide!

If you would like to get involved, please upload your photos and videos here by October 1st. These videos and photos will then be used for a video collage which will be presented to the conference attendees prior to the Kermit Nash presentation. We cannot wait to see you and share what you are doing this year at the conference in October!

Conference Orientation

Prior to the conference, attendees will be able to access the conference orientation product. In addition to learning about SSWLHC and how to make the most of your conference, you will also learn how to access the keynote and breakout presentations and virtual sponsorship hall and learn how to interact with volunteer leaders, attendees and our sponsors.

Connect with Conference Speakers, Sponsors and Your Peers!

Conference networking just got a little easier! SSWLHC conference platform allows attendees to network with conference speakers, sponsors and other attendees in a virtual environment. Whether you want to catch-up with a speaker after a presentation, or find a time to speak with the sponsor, scheduling meetings, all of this is available at the touch of your fingertips!

Kermit B. Nash Lecture

Child Abuse Identification is an Interdisciplinary Process Coordinated by the Social Worker

Presented by Sheila Hickey

Session Description:

The psychosocial assessment and interdisciplinary team discussions are processes that are key to the immediate safety of all children who present to pediatric hospitals for assessment and treatment of injuries and disclosures concerning for violence. The Psychosocial Assessment Screening Tool (PAST) is a comprehensive tool that provides insight into the key elements of children's living environments and the social risk factors that are linked to harmful living and community environments interfering with healthy development. The prevention of the commercial sexual exploitation of children (CSEC) often begins by asking children and caregivers questions about the children's living environment, history of injury and disclosures and risk factors the first time the children present with injuries concerning for violence. This presentation will discuss how the PAST has been used to identify victims of CSEC and recommend interventions.

Learning objectives:

- Review the combined medical and social identifiers of human trafficking
 - Review the Psychosocial Assessment Screening Tool (PAST)
 - Review Interdisciplinary Team Process
 - Review Real Time Interventions and Resources

About Sheila Hickey:

Sheila Hickey is a licensed clinical social worker who is employed at the Ann & Robert H. Lurie Children's Hospital of Chicago as the social work clinical coordinator for the Emergency Department and Protective Services Team. She along with social workers from six pediatric hospitals was invited to participate in the development and standardization of an evidenced based psychosocial assessment. The Social Work Leadership team at Lurie Children's Hospital then standardized the use of this psychosocial assessment to be conducted with all children where there is concern for the presence of violence.

Presentation Description

Grounded both in Travis' personal experience as a trauma patient and in his perspective as a bioethicist, In Pain: A Bioethicist's Personal Struggle with Opioids (both the book and this talk) is an exploration of the role of prescription opioids in medicine, and how to responsibly address the various impacts of America's drug overdose crisis.

Learning Objectives:

By the end of the presentation, audience members should be able to:

1. Articulate the basic dilemma of opioid use;
2. Understand the historical forces driving the dilemma;
3. Identify ethical concerns raised by opioid use in America;
4. Begin evaluating how to resolve a subset of those concerns in their own practice/communities.

About Travis Rieder:

Travis N. Rieder, PhD is a philosopher and bioethicist at the Johns Hopkins Berman Institute of Bioethics, where he directs the Master of Bioethics degree program. Dr. Rieder has written and spoken on many topics, but his work has focused in recent years on the ethical and policy issues raised by America's opioid crisis. On that subject, he has written widely for both the popular and peer-reviewed literature, given a TED talk that has been viewed more than 2 million times, and has published a book with HarperCollins titled In Pain: A Bioethicist's Personal Struggle with Opioids.

General Session

Spiritual Care and Health: Practices, Practitioners, and Ethical Implications Presented by Dr. Keith Meador

President/CEO, Partners in Care Foundation

Presentation Description

Much has been said in the last three decades regarding the roles of spirituality and religion in health care in both professional and lay literature. Many distortions have been propagated regarding both spirituality and health, particularly at their intersection. We will examine distortions and illusions at this intersection considering the practical and ethical implications culturally and for providers. In this context we will consider spiritual care as a part of nurturing health and the care of a community through the lens of ethics of care and systematic integrative practices of care sensitive to the spiritual and faith-based worldviews of clients.

Learning Objectives

- Examine the conceptual frameworks that support the current cultural understandings at the intersections of spiritual care and health.
- Explore ethics of care within communities of care as a paradigm for inclusion of spiritual care responsibly in a pluralistic context.
- Examine examples of integrative practices that illustrate inclusion of spiritual care in systematic innovations within mental health care.

About Dr. Keith Meador:

Keith G. Meador, MD, ThM, MPH, is Professor of Psychiatry and Health Policy at Vanderbilt University Medical Center and Professor of Ethics and Society at Vanderbilt Divinity School. He also serves as the Director of Mental Health and Chaplaincy, a national initiative to foster integration of chaplaincy services into mental health care within the Department of Veterans Affairs. He has served as the Director of the Center for Biomedical Ethics and Society at VUMC since 2012 having joined the faculty at Vanderbilt in July of 2010 as Vice-Chair for Psychiatry prior to becoming director of the Center. He is a physician and board certified psychiatrist with training in theology and public health. Dr. Meador is a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Vanderbilt University and received his medical degree from the University of Louisville. He completed his residency in psychiatry and fellowship in aging and human development at Duke University. His theological education leading to the ThM was at Duke Divinity School and he received his MPH in Epidemiology from the University of North Carolina – Chapel Hill.

His scholarship builds on his clinical experience, research and teaching background in mental health and ethics, and work in practical theology and public health about which he lectures widely and has published numerous publications including the co-authored book, Heal Thyself: Spirituality, Medicine, and the Distortion of Christianity. His academic engagement includes theological and ethical exploration of the intersections of religion and health, along with empirical research regarding socio-cultural determinants of illness, health, and human flourishing.

Plenary Session Presentation

The Columbia Protocol: Saving Lives, Reducing Workloads and Protecting Liability Through Improved Identification of Suicide Risk Presented by Adam Lesser

Presentation Description

The Columbia Protocol (C-SSRS) (www.cssrs.columbia.edu) is now widely recognized as a gold-standard, innovative suicide risk screening tool. Due to its demonstrated ability to identify high risk individuals and guidance for next steps it positively impacts service utilization through decreasing unnecessary interventions, redirecting scarce resources, and expediting care delivery to those at highest risk. Because this screen can be delivered by all gatekeepers, numerous states and countries have moved towards system-wide implementation enabling blanket coverage and linking of systems (e.g., schools, first responders, corrections, hospitals/behavioral health, crisis assessment), fostering prevention. As the C-SSRS is deemed the most-evidence supported tool for suicide risk, with approximately 100 studies supporting its use across cultures, properties and sub-populations and close to 1,000 published studies having used the C-SSRS in the last 5 years alone, experts cite it provides protection against liability. This talk will review the epidemiology of suicide, the development of the C-SSRS and its administration, covering its items predictive of increased risk. System-wide implementation across multiple settings will be discussed.

Learning Objectives

By the end of the presentation, audience members should be able to:

1. Explain how preventative screening models can be used to identify at-risk individuals and establish care plans that allocate resources effectively and identify steps taken to implement a comprehensive screening program in a state, community or agency that includes targeted and public health approaches to prevention.
2. Describe how utilizing a systemic best practice measurement, the C-SSRS, to identify suicidal ideation and behavior results in improved identification and precision, which ultimately saves lives.
3. Demonstrate how the C-SSRS impacts care through operationalized criteria for next steps which in turn facilitates more streamlined triage, redirects scarce resources facilitates care delivery to those at highest risk and provides liability protection.

About Adam Lesser:

Adam Lesser is a licensed clinical social worker, Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychiatric Social Work in the Division of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry at Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons, Lecturer at the Columbia University School of Social Work and the Deputy Director of the Columbia Lighthouse Project at the New York State Psychiatric Institute where he is responsible for all suicide prevention activities related to public health including the international dissemination and implementation of the Columbia Suicide Severity Rating Scale (C-SSRS). He has published, presented internationally and consulted to state and local governments on best practices for suicide risk identification and prevention. His work has been featured in Social Work Today Magazine and on Atlanta National Public Radio, CNN-espanol, Univision and other local print and television media outlets.
